Born in London 1974, I followed a path from sculpture at Central Saint Martins into theatrical and event scenography where I gained a broad range of making skills. In 2005 I joined the M.A. Design Products (Platform Ten) course at the RCA under Ron Arad and since then have concentrated almost solely on furniture. I was awarded an Esmee Fairbairn bursary following my graduate exhibition at the Design Museum, London and my show with the British Council as one of the 'Great Brits' at the Milan Furniture Fair 2007 was followed by an invitation to create an entire installation for Paul Smith in Milan and then further work with Paul Smith in London. Working with both galleries and manufacturers my work continues to be exhibited in both the UK and abroad including the Milan Furniture fair, Design Miami, Stavanger 2008 (Norway), and MoMA New York. In 2009 I was awarded one of the four 'Designer of the Future' awards by Design Miami, followed by a significant installation at Art Basel. Previously I have shown with Murray Moss in New York and during Design Miami on many occasions, also at 21_21 Design Sight in Tokyo. My work is in the collection of the Museum of Jerusalem, Design Museum Holon and various other private collections.

Recent projects have included the design and production of the large central information desk for the Museum of Childhood, a cast porcelain collection for Meissen (Germany), a permanent furniture installation for the Museum of Israel and a nomadic display system for Oyuna (Mongolian Cashmere). For the last year I have been working on a very large public artwork for the new Hospital for Sick Children in Edinburgh - a 188m long wall design that will feature panelised 3D macroscopic skin textures wrapping around the building. This is due to begin installation in late October 2016.

I am also the creator and founder of FORMcard. A handy pocket sized card of bio plastic that you can use to fix and modify your everyday world simply using hot water to melt it. FORMcard was launched on Kickstarter in November 2015 and then transferred to Indiegogo where it concluded its campaign with more than 10,000 customers worldwide. FORMcard is now distributed globally.
